A share in the bounty through

2020 Community
Supported
Agriculture

Being a shareholder is a powerful way to connect to your local food source and eat healthy fresh wholesome & nutritious food seasonally.

How Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) Works

Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) is a food subscription service where you pay the farmer before the season begins for a share in the upcoming harvest. As a CSA member you share in the risk and the bounty of the season.

In return, from mid-June to early October, you are provided with a weekly variety of high-quality, locally grown, seasonally fresh food at an affordable price. You know where your food comes from, you know who grows it.

Along with enjoying good food, you:

- Nurture the environment by purchasing from a farm that uses sustainable organic practices which protect natural resources.
 - Support the local economy and preserve open space by keeping agricultural dollars in Ohio and keeping a local farm in business.
 - Your participation in our CSA helps aid in the survival of local agriculture and you are a direct part of the success of the farm.
- This gives local farmers important early season support for seeds, greenhouse or farm supplies, heat, and labor in the production of your food.
- CSA's help connect you with the people who produce your food.
 - Reduce the number of miles your food travels and the amount (by 50%) of fossil fuels used: that conserves energy and promotes local sustainable agriculture.

Farmers are instruments of good health!
